PDAC, the world's largest mining conference, kicks off in Toronto

For anyone involved in the mining industry, the biggest event of the year is here: PDAC.

For those not familiar, PDAC stands for Prospectors & Developers Association of Canada. Its annual convention in Toronto, held March 3 through 6, is the largest and one of the longest-running mining conferences in the world.

With its roots running back to 1932, today, PDAC has some impressive numbers behind it: boasting more than 25,000 attendees, 1,000 exhibitors, and 3,500 investors.

From prospectors to bankers to government attendees, the list is long and the convention provides a space for thought leadership, promotion, networking and more.

Companies to watch

Below, we've highlighted a few companies at PDAC to keep an eye on.

Cabral Gold Inc (CVE:CBR) (OTCMKTS: CBGZF) has earned a coveted spot as a speaker at one of PDAC's gold exploration sessions. Just this week, the company announced it had uncovered a new high-grade gold system at the Machichie target at its Cuiú Cuiú project in northern Brazil.
