Vaporizer-maker RYAH Medtech inks Canadian distribution agreement

RYAH Medtech Inc is bringing its dose-measuring dry herb vaporizers to Canada.

The privately held company announced an agreement Monday with Northern Green Canada Inc to distribute its dry herb vaporizers and cartridges. The vaporizers work by tracking exactly how much vapor and at what temperature a person inhales.

"I am pleased to announce the commencement of RYAH's footprint in Canada via our new distribution agreement," CEO Greg Wagner said. "Northern Green Canada is a best-in-class [licensed producer] with strong European ties that complements our model of delivering [internet of things] devices along with AI powered data analytics in the medical plant industry."

Wagner is also targeting similar agreements in Europe and Asia.

On June 5, the New York company earned a Medical Establishment License from Health Canada for its cartridges.
