Goldplat back on track, says CEO Kisbey-Green

Gerard Kisbey-Green, CEO of Goldplat (LON:GDP), says the company is back on track operationally after a period of processing and cash-flow issues.

"We've turned the corner and should be on the up and up from now on," said the chief executive.

Last week the firm told investors it had made significant progress reducing its backlog of stocks and easing its problems with third party refiner Rand.

The company, which recovers gold from waste from mining operations, said a new electric boiler had boosted the performance at its existing facilities to five tonnes of loaded carbon per day.
