Admedus advances in North America with more products and markets on the horizon

Wayne Paterson, chief executive of Admedus Ltd (ASX:AHZ), speaks about flagship ADAPT tissue products securing regulatory approval in Canada and a distribution network in the U.S..

Paterson also details landmark progress for the Admedus transcatheter aortic valve replacement (TAVR) device prototype.

"The key for Admedus is that we developed our portfolio in a way that makes us unique and creates an unassailable moat around the company... The company is pivoting towards 3D moulded surgical solutions... When you mould the clinical benefits as well as our ability to shape these products, we are in a very unique space."

A further 16 projects covering many aspects of surgery are in the development pipeline, with releases expected later this year, and new global markets set to open up pending regulatory approvals.
