Perma-Fix expands capacity to process and treat low-level radioactive waste with new facility

Perma-Fix Environmental Services Inc (NASDAQ:PESI) announced Friday the expansion of its Low-Level Radioactive Waste (LLRW) processing and treatment capacity through the addition of a highly specialized facility in Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

The Perma-Fix Environmental Waste Operations Center (EWOC) is an 8.7-acre facility located on the East Tennessee Technology Park (ETTP), which is a former US Department of Energy (DOE) K-25 site.

The facility is dedicated to supporting LLRW processing and disposition, including mechanical processing, to manage multiple waste streams from both government and commercial customers.

The company said the EWOC facility will serve primarily as a multi-disciplinary equipment and component processing center for large component dismantling, size/volume reduction, sort/segregation, waste trans-loading, system operability testing and classified operations.

The ultimate objective will be receipt, preparation, packaging, and transportation of LLRW to approved final disposal facilities (landfills, radiological waste repositories).

"We are delighted to bring forth a new processing and treatment option for complicated LLRW waste streams-in line with our mission of providing safe and cost-effective solutions to complex waste management issues," said CEO Mark Duff in a statement.

"The new facility is highly synergistic with our existing operations, and allows us to add new capabilities that are in high demand among our customers, including the ability to handle/dismantle large components, such as turbines and other reactor equipment, as well as receiving demolition rubble for handling prior to landfill disposal. This facility is ideally situated with an adjacent rail spur, making transportation convenient and efficient."

Duff noted, however, that unlike the company's other facilities, EWOC is not designed to treat hazardous/mixed-waste streams, which means "we believe we can ramp up its throughput in a very low-cost and efficient manner with limited initial capital investment."

Perma-Fix said it recently completed an application for and received a radioactive materials license granted by the state of Tennessee for the receipt, interim storage, and disposition of radioactive waste at EWOC.

A Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA) authorization from the US Environmental Protection Agency Region IV is planned for the near future. The facility, adjacent to the ETTP site
